Pearl S. Buck Writing Center Releases Latest Literary Journal

The Pearl S. Buck Writing Center is proud to invite readers to take a look at its most recent Literary Journal – Summer Issue, Vol. 4 No. 1 – online at www.psbwritingcenter.org. The theme of this issue is Secrets.

The journal features short stories, poetry, memoirs, a play, and two excerpts from novels. Told from the points of view of children, lovers, parents, journalists, and even murderers, the secrets within these stories will captivate, enlighten, and even make readers laugh.

Susan E. Wagner, one of the journal editors, writes in the introductory essay, “We chose Secrets as a theme for this issue of the journal because there is something deeply human about them, something that brings out emotions of every sort. It is universally interesting, and it inspires all kinds of writing. We have a little bit of everything in this issue, a variety well worth exploring.”

Pearl S. Buck Writing Center Press has produced 10 books including one novel, one collection of short stories, one collection of essays, one book of poetry, four memoirs and two children's books, all using Amazon's CreateSpace system, with several other memoirs currently in production.

The Pearl S. Buck Writing Center, in keeping with the literary legacy of Pearl S. Buck, offers writing classes and book discussion groups. It is organized and run by the Pearl S. Buck Volunteer Association. All meetings are held at Pearl S. Buck International, 520 Dublin Road, Hilltown, PA 18944. For more information on the Writing Center and a schedule of classes, please visit <https://pearlsbuck.org/writing-center>.
